With its unique design and the ability to fit any sized tire, the Ten Speed Frameset will stay looking good even after years of faithful service. It can be used in the winter with traction-setting studs as well as with a 700 series freeride tire in the summer. Isotonic is the one place where you can live and die for the competition… The field is probably the hardest and most punishing thing you could ever do. Mersenne...Q: How do I format a transaction in Core Data? I'm using Core Data in an iPhone application. I'm using a UITableView which fills with transactions depending on the user's current balance. I want the UITableView to be formatted like a financial calculator, i.e. with zeros in front of decimals and decimals on the end. How do I go about doing this in Core Data? Should I use a NSNumberFormatter? A: One way to do this would be to add your objects to an NSMutableArray, and have the number formatter add the zeros if you ask it to. This can be done using [formatter setNumberStyle:NSNumberFormatterDecimalStyle]; [formatter setMaximumFractionDigits:2]; [formatter setMinimumFractionDigits:2]; The documentation for NSNumberFormatter contains a lot of useful information. In light of the recent incidents of systemic abuse of bullying in schools across this country we are horrified to see so many children bullied each and every day in our schools. We, parents, friends, and families feel it is our duty to do all that we can to protect our children from this abuse. We must be united and stand together and fight this social scourge that needs to be eradicated so that all children in our schools can learn in a safe environment. We will therefore be organizing parent-child events and meetings across the country
